DEMOCRATIC REGENERATION.

The New Organization Won in State Committee, in the National Councils of the Party and With the People in State-wide Primary.

The nomination of McCormick as the Democratic candidate for Governor is one of the most satisfactory results of the recent primary election. It is well known that, instead of having sought the nomination, he was drafted for the campaign. He made the race in order to complete the work upon which he and his associates had been engaged for years. That work was the regeneration of the Democratic party, which under the old management had degenerated into a mere adjunct of the Republican machine, existing only to help that machine in desperate fights in return for recognition as the official dispenser of minority patronage. McCormick and his associates have made it a real opposition party, standing for real principles and fighting for majorities, instead of begging and trading for minority appointments.

The new movement had won in the State Committee, and had won in the national councils of the party. To complete the victory it was necessary that it should win with the people in a State-wide primary.

The Old Guard rallied its forces for a last desperate life-and-death struggle. Nothing that political ingenuity could suggest was left undone. Their political organization was quickened by a life-giving stream of contributions from the liquor interests, agents were employed to go over the records of Palmer and McCormick, and any detail that could be seized upon was magnified and proclaimed from every platform. They selected Ryan as their candidate, principally because they deluded themselves with the belief that through appeals to those allied with him in race or religion he could bring a third group to the support of the ticket. Their other plans were merely base; this one was almost treasonable. Its nearly complete failure is a matter of unspeakable gratification and a testimonial to the patriotism and good sense of our Irish Catholic fellow citizens, who refused to align themselves politically on racial or religious lines.

In Philadelphia, where this personal Ryan following would naturally be the strongest, his vote is 17,758, only 2311 above Budd's. This locates and specifically defines the amount of Ryan's personal following.

The average vote for Senator, Governor, Supreme Judge, Lieutenant Governor in Philadelphia was 15,210. The "Old Guard" has stood up and been counted in Philadelphia before, and it is an established fact that it numbered about 6000—a well-drilled army of political mercenaries, which can be marched to the polls at any time to vote for any candidate, black or white, Republican or Democrat. The presence of Ryan at the head of the ticket accounts for about 2500 more. This leaves 7000 or 8000 to represent the co-operation of the liquor interests, the disappointed office-seekers and the political flotsam and jetsam which accumulates in the wake of any vociferous political propagandist.

Ryan's Statement.

Michael J. Ryan, candidate for governor against Vance C. McCormick, made this statement:

"I have submitted my candidacy for the governorship to the judgement of the Democrats of Pennsylvania, and regardless of what the causes for my defeat may have been, my opponent has been successful by about 15,000 majority.

"I thank the loyal Democrats of Pennsylvania who, without hope of reward and mainly through personal friendship, rallied to my banner. They have the satisfaction of knowing that against their candidate was uttered no word reflecting upon his public or private career, and I trust that my future will accentuate the cordial relations between them and me, for I stand ready to help them, as they have aided me, in any way I may.

"Participation in the primaries carries with it, as I have always declared, the obligations, upon the candidate and his partisans, to acquiesce in the result and support the nominee. I bow to the will of my fellow citizens and I ask my friends to do likewise."

MOSAROSCH GUILTY.

Jury Finds Emma Shay Not Guilty—Close of First Week of Court.

Mosarosch was found guilty of voluntary manslaughter on Thursday afternoon of last week. He has not yet been sentenced.

At the convening of the court on Thursday afternoon Miss Emma Shay was brought into the court, she being indicted on two indictments, the one being for murder, and the other for concealing the death of a male bastard child. The Comm. selected to go to trial on the charge of murder. The indictment was read to her by the Prothonotary to which she plead not guilty and expressed her desire to be tried by God and her country. She is represented by Clement Dale and H. C. Quigley, while the District Attorney represents the Commonwealth and the selection of a jury was at once proceeded with. The entire panel of jurors was exhausted when only eleven jurors had been selected, and the twelfth juror had to be selected by talismen called by the Sheriff and eighteen talismen were called before the twelfth juror was selected. In the selection of this jury the defendant exercised nineteen peremptory challenges while the Comm. exercised twenty peremptory challenges and there were fifteen challenges for cause. The jury as selected is as follows: George G. Parker, florist, Philipsburg; Joseph Beckenbach, farmer, Miles; Elmer Sunday, laborer, Ferguson; A. M. Vail, laborer, Philipsburg; Reuben Dumbleton, laborer, Rush; Joseph Swires, foreman, Philipsburg; H. P. Zerby, farmer, Walker; J. E. Harter, merchant, Penn; Irvin Smith, laborer, Haines; H. B. Parsons, carpenter, Patton; Fred Henry, laborer, South Philipsburg; Charles E. Yearick, retired, Howard Borough, the last named being a talisman. The jury was completed and sworn at 9:40 on Friday morning.

On Thursday noon when the case was first called the defendant moved to quash the indictment but the motion was overruled. The District Attorney opened the case to the jury on Friday at 9:45 and the taking of testimony was at once proceeded with. This jury on account of the defendant being indicted for murder has to be kept together and separate and apart from the public and the Sheriff was obliged to make arrangements for their entertainment so that they would not be separated and the jury placed in charge of J. S. Carson and J. H. Spangler.

At the close of the defendant's testimony the court allowed each side one hour for argument to the jury, and Mr. Dale on behalf of the defendant closed his argument Saturday noon, and when court re-convened at 1:15 Saturday afternoon Mr. Fortney, the District Attorney, made his argument to the jury, followed by the charge of the court, defining the different grades of homicide and giving general instructions to the jury as to their duties and powers in a fair and explicit way and the jury retired at 2:40, returning at 4:05 with a verdict of not guilty. There was considerable applause from the audience on hearing the verdict and the defendant at once proceeded to the jury box, shaking hands with the jurors, with members of the bar and others inside of the bar railing, and after adjournment of court shook hands with the court.

The grand jury made their final report on Tuesday afternoon and were discharged. Their report being in substance, that they had passed on five bills of indictment, finding four of them true bills and ignoring one. That they had found the jail in good condition with the exception that they recommended the papering of the women's department in the jail and that the ceiling be plastered where the roof had leaked, and that the jail be spouted at the end or right hand side of the jail and recommend the repapering of the Sheriff's office, and further report that the spouting around the court house and especially at the rear end should be repaired and recommend raising of the main chimney on the main court house roof from five to six feet on account of draft and the soot and smoke settling around the building and the neighborhood.

Ran Off to Fish.

Three boys, at present staying at the John Delaney home at Earlystown, early Saturday morning, ran away to fish in a Seven Mountain stream at Nevils above Colyer. On returning they had just three dozen speckled beauties, but no bait, no grub; a few aching limbs, a great experience; no regrets, no feeling of remorse. The elder of the lads, Danny Delaney, is credited with having planned the outing, and spiriting a young horse of but twenty-three seasons from the stable, he had no trouble in persuading his companions, Johnny Gummo of Lock Haven and Jimmy W. Gunsallus of Nittany, to accompany him. They hied away in great glee, and kept in good spirits all the day long. The boys were aged eighty-one, sixty-nine and sixty-seven years, respectively, and consequently were not spanked on their return.

The Roaming Farmer.

The frequency with which American farmers move from one farm to another, according to the census bureau, "very likely forms one of the chief causes for the decline of rural prosperity or a hindrance to greater prosperity."

Of the 6,361,502 farmers in the United States, April 15, 1910, approximately 52 per cent had occupied their farms less than five years.

Meeting of Classis.

West Susquehanna Classis of the Reformed church met in its fifty-eighth annual session in St. Peter Reformed church, Rebersburg, Thursday, Friday and Saturday of last week.

The opening sermon was preached by the retiring president, Rev. W. E. Harr, Lock Haven. Immediately after the sermon a new president was elected to act during the current year. The president elect is Rev. J. F. B. Griessemer, Freeburg.

Business sessions were held on Friday and Saturday, from 8 a. m. till 4:30 p. m., with a recess from 11:30 a. m. till 1:30 p. m., excepting on Saturday afternoon from 2:30 till 3:30, at which time preparatory service to the Holy Communion was held. Rev. R. R. Jones, of Centre Hall, preached the sermon.

The evening services were popular meetings at which time there were presented to the public a brief survey of the various activities of the Reformed church. The attendance at the sessions of Classis was good, all the active ministers on the roll of Classis were in attendance, and elders from nearly all the charges.

West Susquehanna Classis passed resolutions on Temperance, identical in spirit with those passed by the General Synod at Lancaster earlier in the week. These resolutions are in substance those adopted by the Federal Council of the churches of Christ in America.

Serious Shooting Affair.

A drunken debauch on the part of John Daughenbaugh, aged 31, and John James, aged fifty, at Mt. Union, Huntingdon county, resulted in a shooting fray which will undoubtedly prove fatal for the younger man. The shooting took place Sunday morning and followed an order to leave the house by Mrs. Daughenbaugh who could no longer endure the quarreling the men had come to through their drinking. Going to the shanty of James, Daughenbaugh entered first and without a warning James fired a bullet from a 38 calibre revolver into the abdomen of his drinking mate. James was arrested and Daughenbaugh was taken to the hospital at Huntingdon.

Will Walk to St. Louis.

Friday afternoon about five o'clock W. L. Shortess reached Centre Hall which lies in his route from Berwick to St. Louis, for which point the young man is headed on a wager of $100. He left Berwick Wednesday, May 20th, and hopes to reach St. Louis in forty days, averaging twenty-five miles per day. The day he reached Centre Hall he covered thirty-two miles, resting here over night to regain his strength for the big trip. He will go by way of Erie, Cleveland, and Toledo. One of the requisites for winning the wager is that he receive a certificate from every town of a stated population, through which he passes, either from a newspaper editor or a town official. Mr. Shortess asked for the Reporter's signature certifying his passage through Centre Hall. He is a giant in stature and should have no difficulty to do his Weston act on schedule time.

REFORMS OPPOSE BOOZE.

General Synod Passes Strong Measures in Opposition to Rum and Redeems Itself.

The following preamble and resolutions were passed by the General Synod of the Reformed church in session at Lancaster:

"General Synod has been slow to declare itself upon this most vital issue and the time has now come when there should be no uncertain utterance. Science, business, experience, religion have spoken in a word that cannot be controverted. Science declares that "alcohol is a poison; that its use as a beverage is destructive and degenerating to the human organism; that its effect on the body is depressive, narcotic and anasthetic."

"Railroad companies are abolishing liquor from their dining cars, passing very stringent rules regarding its use among their employes. Business concerns are rapidly assuming a similar attitude; great stores are eliminating it from the articles of merchandise; leading newspapers are refusing advertisements from the liquor trade.

"The Secretary of the Navy Daniels has ordered that after July 1, 1914, the so-called "Wine-Mess" shall be abolished from the navy and navy yards. Nine states have outlawed the saloon and by far the greater per cent. of the pauperism and crime of our country may be directly traced to the presence of this iniquity. Fourteen leading church bodies of the country have special temperance agencies. In these ways the question of temperance has been lifted from the plain of prejudice and opinion to the place where question and argument are out of order.

"There is only one position for the church to assume in regard to the saloon and the use of alcoholic beverages. It is an unmitigated evil to the individual, society and the state. The church through its General Synod and District Synod, Classis and congregations should advocate total abstinence as the surest safeguard against the evils of intemperance, and the elimination of the saloon as one of the great steps in the preservation of national integrity.

1. "That the temperance Commission of General Synod, which is constituted of Synod's delegates to the Federal Council, continue to co-operate actively with the Federal Council, and its Commission on Temperance, expressing the hope that all temperance agitation and education in the churches might eventually come under the direction of this body.

2. That General Synod desire to formulate her policy in accord with that of the Federal Council, and further expressed the hope that it will be one of sane aggressiveness against the iniquity.

3. That, in accordance with the recommendations of the Federal Council of churches, that Synod and Classis be requested to call the attention of pastors and people to the importance of using the temperance lessons in the Sunday-school and temperance literature as well as the church papers and Sunday-school periodicals, for the young as a means of education, the advantage of the temperance pledge as a means of security and that wherever possible our pastors and people co-operate in securing the introduction into the day schools of all grades such text-books as will make plain the effect of alcoholic liquors upon the body and mind, the result of scientific investigations into all phases of the subject, the effect of the liquor traffic upon economic and social conditions, and the relation of the traffic to pauperism, ignorance and crime.

4. The General Synod announces its emphatic disapproval of the practice of engaging in the manufacture or sale of liquor, the renting of property for such purposes, the signing of applications for saloon licenses presenting such application in court, endorsing the bonds of saloon keepers, or in otherwise abetting this most serious evil, and the request is made through Synod and Classis that members of our congregations refrain from the practices herein condemned as being directly opposed to Christ and Christianity.

5. That General Synod requests, through the District Synod, that the trustees, presidents, and faculties of the educational and other institutions of the Reformed church, whether directly or indirectly under her patronage, use all honorable means to educate in the principles of temperance and Christian citizenship, and to encourage the practice of total abstinence in private and in public.

6. That General Synod urge upon the membership of our congregations, through the Synods and Classes, the duty of working and praying for the legitimate but speedy elimination of the saloon and the liquor traffic from state and nation, and that to this end we endorse the national prohibition amendment.

On Saturday automobile license No. 100,000 was issued to Miss Bradley of Harrisburg. $10,000 were turned into the treasury on Saturday on account of auto licenses sold.

BECKER AGAIN FOUND GUILTY

Only Pardon or Court Interference Can Save His Life.

WILL FILE SECOND APPEAL

Former Police Lieutenant Will Appeal—Tears Stream Down Foreman's Face As He Announces Decision.

New York.—Twelve men decided for the second time that Charles Becker was the arch-conspirator responsible for the Rosenthal murder, which nearly two years ago awoke New York to a realization of corruption in the Police Department and opened a new era of police reform.

Becker, once a police lieutenant, was found guilty of murder in the first degree. Only a pardon or interference again by the Court of Appeals can save him from following to the electric chair the four gunmen who shot Herman Rosenthal, the gambler, early on the morning of July 16, 1912. The jury decided that the gunmen were Becker's agents.

Five ballots were taken by the Jury. The first ballot is said to have stood six for guilty in the first degree, two for not guilty, three for a lesser degree, and one blank. A second ballot, taken after the jurrors had had luncheon, brought one man over to the majority. The third ballot showed a gain of two and the fourth stood ten for guilty. The fifth ballot was unanimous.

Tears streamed down the foreman's face as he announced the decision and tears stood in the eyes of several other jurymen; but sympathy did not warp their judgment. They had agreed that the corroboration which the District Attorney failed to present at the first trial to support the stories of Rose, Vallon and Webber, the three accomplices who turned informers, had been furnished by the new witnesses at the second.

Becker's Counsel To Appeal.

Becker's counsel announced that he would appeal and gained a week's stay for the preparation of his future campaign. The defendant was granted a short meeting with his wife and his brothers and then taken back to his cell in the Tombs.

INFORMATION IS WANTED.

Message Sent To Carranza Concerns Sending Of a Representative. Mediators Trying To Arrange a Bipartite Agreement.

Washington, D. C.—As was anticipated, the mediators at Niagara Falls have struck the first of the series of rocks—the purposes and attitude of Carranza and the Constitutionalists—on which may be wrecked the fragile craft of peace the A. B. C. powers have been endeavoring to construct.

A message from Niagara Falls indicating that the mediators were anxious for information as to the plans and purposes of the Constitutionalists, and that it was essential that the Constitutionalists should have a representative at Niagara to furnish that information was made public. Since the Constitutionalists had refused to participate in the mediation scheme it was a delicate proposition to put up to them.

However, after a series of conferences here, it became known that a Constitutionalist representative will likely be sent to Niagara for the purpose of furnishing information to the A. B. C. mediators as to Carranza's plans and purposes.

Up To Carranza.

If General Carranza consents, it is probable that the Constitutionalist representative to be sent to Niagara will be Jose Vasconceles, a young Mexican lawyer, who is the Constitutionalists' confidential agent in Canada. Vasconceles is now in Montreal.

The Constitutionalist representative will go with the distinct understanding that he is not to participate in mediation, that he is only to serve as a medium of informaton concerning Constitutionalist aims and conditions in the territory they control, and that the sending of such a representative is not to involve the Constitutionalists in any way in any plan of the mediators for the pacification of Mexico.

HUERTA FACING REVOLT.

Foreigners Just From Mexico Expect Uprising There.

Vera Cruz.—A revolt in the Mexican Army in the capital at any moment would cause no surprise, according to refugees arriving here. Foreigners there expect daily the beginning of another period similar to that of February last year.

The refugees assert that all that is lacking to bring about such an uprising is a leader with sufficient courage to head the movement. They say treason against General Huerta is uttered boldly on the streets and in the saloons, were formerly conspirators surrounded themselves with all possible secrecy.

Mexico City is overrun with adherents of Venustiano Carranza, and these men appear anxious to forestall any attempt of General Huerta and his followers to escape. All the Cabinet officers and General Huerta himself are said to be kept under close watch to prevent their flight.

The resignation of more members of the Cabinet, including Querido Moheno, who was the most zealous supporter of General Huerta, is rumored as likely in the near future.

CORPSE GROANS IN MORGUE.

The Attendant Flees—Train Victim Later Succumbs.

Lacrosse, Wis.—Ingvald Berg, of Whalen, Minn., went to sleep on the Burlington track near here. A train hit him. Berg's body was brought to a morgue in Lacrosse. As an undertaker prepared it for burial, it suddenly stirred, groaned and rolled from the bier to the floor. The attendant fled, shaking. A physician was summoned.

FOR MONOPLY OF TRANSPORTATION

Government Control of Railroads Urged By Mellen.

SAYS T. R. CHECKED MORSE

President Of the New Haven Road Gives Another Interesting Chapter Of Financial History.

Washington, D. C.—An absolute monopoly of transportation under government regulation and control, was suggested by Charles S. Mellen, former president of the New Haven Railroad to the Interstate Commerce Commission, as the solution of the American railroad problem. "To get efficiency and economy," declared Mr. Mellen, "there must be a monopoly; and that monopoly is certain to be the United States government."

A little later he remarked "Every time a railroad official comes to Washington he has to take off his hat to some government official."

Mr. Mellen appeared to have recovered from his evident fatigue when he appeared before the commission to resume his testimony. He was virile and active, mentally and physically. He responded to the gruelling line of interrogatories fired at him by Chief Counsel Joseph W. Folk vigorously and promptly, never hesitating a second for a word.

He told at length the story of his steamship transactions with Charles W. Morse. Concerning these, Mr. Mellen explained he felt it desirable to confer with Colonel Roosevelt, who then was president of the United States. He told the President that he had received an offer of $20,000,000 from Morse for the New Haven steamship holdings and felt inclined to accept it, because thus the New Haven would be able to turn the property into cash. Mr. Roosevelt, he said, apparently was anxious that Morse should be checked in his ambition to acquire a monopoly of the steamship lines and urged Mr. Mellen not to sell.

SILLIMAN SAFE

COMPLICATION TO MEDIATION REMOVED.

Washington, D. C.—Threatening complications to mediation was removed when definite word reached the State Department that Vice-Consul John R. Silliman, arrested at Saltillo and long sought for, had arrived safely at Mexico City.

The news of Silliman's safety became known at the moment when Secretary Bryan was making public reports received from refugees that Silliman had been executed on May 18 by the Federals at Saltillo.

Great relief was expressed by Cabinet members, several of them saying it removed one of the most dangerous features in the situation.

While, however, Silliman himself is safe, there remain several very grave features connected with his arrest. Unofficial reports indicated he was placed under arrest while acting as United States consul, imprisoned, tried as a spy and condemned to death.

Also that the United States Consulate was entered, the official archives being taken, including the State Department's code. Silliman's personal safety relieves the situation, but the other indignities remain to be atoned for in the ultimate settlement.

TWO KILLED IN PISTOL DUEL.

Virginians Shoot Each Other Dead At Funeral.

Gate City, Va.—Charles P. Harris and Henry Begley shot each other dead during the progress of a burial a few miles from Fort Blackmore, Scott county, Va. They began joking each other and trouble resulted. Begley shot Harris twice in the legs. As the third shot was fired Harris drew his pistol and fired. Each was shot through the heart.

ROOSEVELT BACK AT OYSTER BAY

Colonel Returns Home After Exploring South America.

HE LOST FIFTY-FIVE POUNDS

Leaves Liner Aidan At Quarantine and Goes To His Home On a Tug—Reaffirms Discovery Of River.

New York.—Theodore Roosevelt returned home Tuesday from his visit of many months to South America. Accompanied by the two naturalists of his party, George K. Cherry and Leo E. Miller, he arrived from Para, Brazil, at Quarantine shortly before 4 o'clock on board the Booth liner Aidan.

With a few crisp sentences, punctuated by decisive gestures, he reaffirmed the verity of the "River of Doubt," curtly denied having expressed himself as to Presidential probabilities for 1916, declared he would not run for Governor of New York, made a few deprecatory remarks about his critics and, with harbor craft tooting and flags fluttering, was taken on board the tug W. F. Dalzell, which proceeded to Oyster Bay.

Friends who had been alarmed by the reports of Colonel Roosevelt's severe illness were greatly surprised when they saw him. He was noticeably thinner, and he used a cane as he walked about the steamer's deck, but his face wore a healthy tan and he had apparently not lost an ounce of the vigor and energy which have become characteristic of him.

After stopping 10 days in this country Mr. Roosevelt will go to Spain to the wedding of his son Kermit.

PLEADS FOR WORLD PEACE.

Japanese Premier Also Asks Reason For Panama Fortifications.

Tokio, Japan.—A plea to the press of the world to work for the removal of misunderstandings and suspicions between nations was made by Premier Count Shigeno Okuma in addressing a gathering of Japanese and foreign journalists.

He declared these misunderstadings and suspicions are terrible obstructions to the world's peace, but added that the time had not arrived in international relations to apply the Christian text, "whosoever shall smite thee on the right cheek, turn to him the other also." Nations, he said, must be strong and exact respect for their rights.

The Japanese Premier declared that unjustified suspicion had led to the fortification of peaceful countries, such as New Zealand and Australia.

LOW SICK RATE.

General Funston's Report On Condition Of His Men.

Washington, D. C.—General Funston reported to the War Department that the sick rate among the soldiers at Vera Cruz is 1.49 per cent. and 1.46 per cent. among the marines. There are 41 soldiers in the hospital and 19 in their quarters, while among the marines the sick total is 45. The General said that there was no malaria in the camp. The War Department, upon General Funston's request, is preparing to send to Vera Cruz apparatus and chemicals sufficient to render water potable for the soldiers for a period of 30 days.

ASKS U. S. TO INTERVENE.

Judge Lindsey Urges President To Force a Settlement Of Labor War.

Washington, D. C.—Intervention by the Federal Government to force an agreement between mine owners and miners in the Colorado coal fields was urged on President Wilson by Judge Ben B. Lindsey, of Denver, and a delegation of Colorado women. It was indicated later that the President was willing to do everything within his constitutional power to bring peace in Colorado, but that he believed the State should solve the difficulty if possible.

DEATH RATE RISES SLIGHTLY.

This For Entire Country; In Large Cities Tendency Is Downward.

Washington, D. C.—Death rate in the United States was higher by .2 of 1 per cent. in 1913 than in 1912, according to a statement by the Census Bureau. The death rate of the registration area of the United States in 1913 was 14.1 per 1,000 estimated population, compared with 13.9 per cent. in 1912. It was, however, less than for 1911, which was 14.2, and markedly lower than the average rate for the five-year period 1901-1905, which was 16.2.

SIX IN AUTO KILLED.

One Was Wealthiest Citizen Of Ashville, Ohio—Machine and Car Burn.

Columbus, Ohio.—Six persons were killed near Ashville, 25 miles south of Columbus, when a Scioto Valley Traction car struck an automobile at a crossing. The car and the automobile were consumed by fire after the collision. The gasoline tank of the automobile exploded and came in contact with the third rail.

PARDON BOARD HOLDS SESSION

Refuses to Commute Sentence of James Linze.

SCHOOLS AID TO MERCHANTS

Bucks County Man Must Hang—U. of P. Expert Says Special Courses In Salesmanship Are Needed To Help Retailer.

(Harrisburg Correspondence.)

Harrisburg.—The State Board of Pardons refused to recommend commutation of the death sentence of James Linzi, Bucks. A protest was entered by the District Attorney of the county against commutation. The board granted rehearings to Malena Massa, Schuylkill, and Frank Wells, Fayette, refused clemency and sentenced to be hanged. They were granted respites.

The board recommended pardons as follows: Samuel Silk, Philadelphia, assault; Rosa Elorio and Francesca Tedd, Northampton, larceny; James K. Taylor, York, larceny; Charles A. Ensign, Erie, embezzlement; Andrew Porter, Philadelphia, second degree murder, convicted April, 1911; Edward Franklin, Philadelphia, larceny.

Refusals were as follows: Henry and George Jacobs, Perry, larceny, etc.; Joseph W. Beaman and Edward M. Cowell, Bradford, conspiracy; Michael Morwitz, Philadelphia, rape; Tom Timber, Washington, pandering.

The board affirmed the following recommendations of Boards of Prison Inspectors for full pardon of paroled prisoners; James McArdle, Allegheny, second degree murder; Stephen Austin, Allegheny, robbery, etc.; John Abraham, Fayette, burglary; Lewis Irwin, Erie, Mayhem; Leroy Levan, Carbon, larceny.

Rehearings were granted Adolph Strogl, Clinton, larceny, and Mike Peterson, Dauphin, larceny, and refused Albert L. Scholl, Lycoming, conspiracy, and S. H. Anderson, Allegheny, abortion.

Schools As Aid To Merchants.

The establishment of special courses in salesmanship in the high schools and night schools, to solve problems of retail merchants, was advocated by Herbert W. Hess, instructor at the University of Pennsylvania, in an address at the meeting of Retail Merchants' Week, in the Vernon Park Free Library, Germantown.

James W. Fisk, of New York, manager of the salesmanship division of the "Dry Goods Economist," and a lecturer at the University of Pennsylvania, spoke on "More Profit Through Better Salesmanship." Select Councilman Colonel Sheldon Potter presided.

Mr. Hess discussed "Night Schools as an Aid to the Retailers." He told how retailers neglect opportunities and contended that school systems should recognize selling as a profession and aim to instruct along lines beneficial to those who sell. He said:

"The greatest waste in connection with retail selling today is the stagnation of initiativeness. Stagnation vies with progress. 'What has been' is not giving way fast enough to 'what should be.' But it is such movements as these among retailers themselves which will at least make all concerned feel that they are trying to meet competition intelligently.

No Funds To Dedicate Arch.

Because no provision has been made in the way of an appropriation to cover expenses, it is probable that dedication of the new $100,000 Washington memorial arch at Valley Forge will have to be abandoned, or at least postponed. It was to have been dedicated on June 19, the one hundred and thirty-sixth anniversary of the evacuation of the camp by Washington. It is estimated that it would require $10,000 for the transportation of troops and other expenses of a dedication. Colonel W. H. Sayem, president of the Valley Forge Commission, hopes the State Legislature will supply the necessary funds.

Aid Of Brotherhoods.

Leaders of the strike of the Federated Railway Employes declared that they would have enough members of the other brotherhoods on the petitions to have the joint board meet to consider various grievances and the strike situation to force official action by those organizations in spite of statements made by railroad officials that they had assurances from officers of the Brotherhoods that they would remain neutral. Statements issued by the Pennsylvania Railroad officials said they had assurances from brotherhood grand lodge officers that what is being done by members here is purely individual.

District Attorney Dies In Park.

District Attorney C. M. Graybill, of Juniata county, died unexpectedly while seated on a bench in a city park today.

He came here as a delegate to the Odd Fellows' convention and with some friends was seated in the park when he was attacked by heart disease and fell dead. Mr. Graybill was thirty-five years old.

SYNOPSIS.

John Valiant, a rich society favorite, suddenly discovers that the Valiant corporation, which his father founded and which was the principal source of his wealth, has failed. He voluntarily turns over his private fortune to the receiver for the corporation. His entire remaining possessions consist of an old motor car, a white bull dog and Damory court, a neglected estate in Virginia. On the way to Damory court he meets Shirley Dandridge, an auburn-haired beauty, and decides that he is going to like Virginia immensely. Shirley's mother, Mrs. Dandridge, and Major Bristow exchange reminiscences during which it is revealed that the major, Valiant's father, and a man named Sasson were rivals for the hand of Mrs. Dandridge in her youth. Sasson and Valiant fought a duel on her account in which the former was killed. Valiant finds Damory court overgrown with weeds and creepers and the buildings in a very much neglected condition. He decides to rehabilitate the place and make the land produce a living for him. Valiant saves Shirley from the bite of a snake, which bites him. Knowing the deadliness of the bite, Shirley sucks the poison from the wound and saves his life. Shirley tells her mother of the incident and the latter is strangely moved at hearing that a Valiant is again living at Damory court.

The major nodded. "Ah, yes," he said. "The Continental prison-camp."

"And just over this rise there I can see an old court-house, and the Virginia Assembly boiling under the golden tongue-lashing of lean raw-boned Patrick Henry. I see a messenger gallop up and see the members scramble to their saddles—and then, Tarleton and his red-coats streaming up, too late."

"Well," commented the doctor deliberately, "all I have to say is, don't materialize too much to Mrs. Poly Gifford when you meet her. She'll have you lecturing to the Ladies' Church Guild before you know it."

"I hope you ride, Mr. Valiant?" the latter asked genially.

"I'm fond of it," said Valiant, "but I have no horse as yet."

"I was thinking," pursued the major, "of the coming tournament."

"Tournament?"

The doctor cut in. "A ridiculous cock-a-doodle-do which gives the young bucks a chance to rig out in silly toggery and prance their colts before a lot of petticoats!"

"It's an annual affair," explained the major; "a kind of spectacle. For many years, by the way, it has been held on a part of this estate—perhaps you will have no objection to its use this season?—and at night there is a dance at the Country Club. By the way, you must let me introduce you there—tomorrow. I've taken the liberty already of putting your name up."

"Good lord!" growled the doctor, aside. "He counts himself young! If I'd reached your age, Bristow—"

"You have," said the major, nettled. "Four years ago!—As I was saying, Mr. Valiant, they ride for a prize. It's a very ancient thing—I've seen references to it in a colonial manuscript in the Byrd Library at Westover. No doubt it's come down directly from the old jousts."

"You don't mean to say," cried his hearer in genuine astonishment, "that Virginia has a lineal descendant of the tourney?"

The major nodded. "Yes. Certain sections of Kentucky used to have it, too, but it has died out there. It exists now only in this state. It's a curious thing that the old knightly meetings of the middle ages should survive today only on American soil and in a corner of Virginia."

Doctor Southall, meanwhile, had set his gaze on the litter of pamphlets. He turned with an appreciative eye. "You're beginning in earnest. The Agricultural Department. And the Congressional frank."

"I'm afraid I'm a sad sketch as a scientist," laughed Valiant. "My point of view has to be a somewhat practical one. I must be self-supporting. Damory Court is a big estate. It has grain lands and forest as well. If my ancestors lived from it, I can. It's not only that," he went on more slowly, "I want to make the most of the place for its own sake, too. Not only of its possibilities for earning, but of its natural beauties. I lack the resources I once had, but I can give it thought and work, and if they can bring Damory Court back to anything even remotely resembling what it once was, I'll not spare either."

The major smote his knee and even the doctor's face showed a grim, if transient approval. "I believe you'll do it!" exclaimed the former. "And let me say, sah, that the neighborhood is not unaware of the splendid generosity which is responsible for the present lack of which you speak."

Valiant put out his hand with a little gesture of deprecation, but the other disregarded it. "Confound it, sah, it was to be expected of a Valiant. Your ancestors wrote their names in capital letters over this country. They were an up and down lot, but good or bad (and, as Southall says, I reckon"—he nodded toward the great portrait above the couch—"they weren't all little woolly lambs) they did big things in a big way."

Valiant leaned forward eagerly, a question on his lips. But at the moment a diversion occurred in the shape of Uncle Jefferson, who re-entered, bearing a tray on which set sundry jugs and clinking glasses, glowing with white and green and gold.

"You old humbug," said the doctor, "don't you know the major's that poisoned with mint-juleps already that he can't get up before eight in the morning?"

"Well, suh," tittered Uncle Jefferson, "Ah done foun' er mint-baid down below de kitchens dis mawnin'. Yo'-all gemmun' 'bout de bigges' expuhts in dis yeah county, en Ah reck'n Mars' Valiant sho' 'sist on yo' samplin' et."

"Sah," said the major feelingly, turning to his host, "I'm proud to drink your health in the typical beverage of Virginia!" He touched glasses with Valiant and glared at the doctor, who was sipping his own thoughtfully. "Poems have been written on the julep, sah."

"They make good epitaphs, too," observed the doctor.

"I noticed your glass isn't going begging," the major retorted. "Unc' Jefferson, that's as good mint as grew in the gyarden of Eden. See that those lazy niggers of yours don't grub the patch out by mistake."

"Yas, sah," said Uncle Jefferson, as he retired with the tray. "Ah gwine-ter put er fence eroun' dat ar baid 'fo' sundown."

The question that had sprung to Valiant's lips now found utterance. "I saw you look at the portrait there," he said to the major. "Which of my ancestors is it?"

The other got up and stood before the mantel-piece in a Napoleonic attitude. "That," he said, fixing his eyeglasses, "is your great-grandfather, Devil-John Valiant."

"Devil-John!" echoed his host. "Yes, I've heard the name."

The doctor guffawed. "He earned it, I reckon. I never realized what a sinister expression that missing optic gives the old ruffian. There was a skirmish during the war on the hillside yonder and a bullet cut it out. When we were boys we used to call him 'Old One-Eye.'"

"It interests me enormously," John Valiant spoke explosively.

"The stories of Devil-John would fill a mighty big book," said the major. "By all accounts he ought to have lived in the middle ages." Crossing the library, he looked into the dining-room. "I thought I remembered. The portrait over the console there is his wife, your great-grandmother. They say he bet that when he brought his bride home, she should walk into Damory Court between rows of candlesticks worth twenty-thousand dollars. He made the wager good, too, for when she came up those steps out there, there was a row of ten candles burning on either side of the doorway, each held by a young slave worth a thousand dollars in the market.

"Some say he grew jealous of his wife's beauty. There were any number of stories told of his cruelties to her that aren't worth repeating. She died early—poor lady—and your grandfather was the only issue. Devil-John himself lived to be past seventy, and at that age, when most men were stacking their sins and groaning with the gout, he was dicing and fox-hunting with the youngest of them. He always swore he would die with his boots on, and they say when the doctor told him he had only a few hours leeway, he made his slaves dress him completely and prop him on his horse. They galloped out so, a negro on either side of him. It was a stormy night, black as the Earl of Hell's riding-boots, with wind and lightning, and he rode cursing at both. There's an old black-gum tree a mile from here that they still call Devil-John's tree. They were just passing under it when the lightning struck it. Lightning has no effect on the black-gum, you know. The bolt glanced from the tree and struck him between the two slaves without harming either of them. It killed his horse, too. That's the story. To be sure at this date nobody can separate fact from fiction. Possibly he wasn't so much worse than the rest o' his neighbors—not excepting the parsons. 'Other times, other manners.'"

"They weren't any worse than the present generation," said the doctor malevolently. "Your four bottle men then knew only claret: now they punish whiskey-straight."

The major buried his nose in his julep for a long moment before he looked at the doctor blandly. "I agree with you, Bristow," he said: "but it's the first time I ever heard you admit that much good of your ancestors."

"Good!" said the doctor belligerently. "Me? I don't! I said people now were no better. As for the men of that time, they were a cheap swaggering lot of bullies and swash-bucklers. When I read history I'm ashamed to be descended from them."

"I desire to inform you, sah," said the major, stung, "that I too am a descendant of those bullies and swash-bucklers, as you call them. And I wish from my heart I thought we, nowadays, could hold a tallow-dip to them."

"You refer, no doubt," said the doctor with sarcasm, "to our friend Devil-John and his ideal treatment of his wife!"

"No, sah," replied the major warmly. "I'm not referring to Devil-John. There were exceptions, no doubt, but for the most part they treated their women folk as I believe their Maker made them to be treated! The man who failed in his courtesy there, sah, was called to account for it. He was mighty apt to find himself standing in the cool dawn at the butt-end of a—"

He broke off and coughed. There was an awkward pause in which he set down his glass noisily and rose and stood before the open bookcase. "I envy you this, sah," he said with somewhat of haste. "A fine old collection. Bless my soul, what a curious volume!"

As he spoke, his hand jerked out a heavy-looking leather-back. Valiant, who had risen and stood beside him, saw instantly that what he had drawn from the shelf was the morocco case that held the rusted dueling-pistol! In the major's hands the broken box opened. A sudden startled look darted across his leonine face. With smothered exclamation he thrust it back between the books and closed the glass door.

Valiant had paled. His previous finding of the weapon had escaped his mind. Now he read, as clearly as if it had been printed in black-letter across the sunny wall, the significance of the major's confusion. That weapon had been in his father's hand when he faced his opponent in that fatal duel! It flashed across his mind as the doctor lunged for his hat and stick and got to his feet.

"Come, Bristow," said the latter irritably. "Your feet will grow fast to the floor presently. We mustn't talk a new neighbor to death. I've got to see a patient at six."

CHAPTER XVII.

John Valiant Asks a Question.

Valiant went with them to the outer door. A painful thought was flooding his mind. It hampered his speech and it was only by a violent effort that he found voice:

"One moment! There is a question I would like to ask."

Both gentlemen had turned upon the steps and as they faced him he thought a swift glance passed between them. They waited courteously, the doctor with his habitual frown, the major's hand fumbling for the black ribbon on his waistcoat.

"Since I came here, I have heard"—his tone was uneven—"of a duel in which my father was a principal. There was such a meeting?"

"There was," said the doctor after the slightest pause of surprise. "Had you known nothing of it?"

"Absolutely nothing."

The major cleared his throat. "It was something he might naturally not have made a record of," he said. "The two had been friends, and it—it was a fatal encounter for the other. The doctor and I were your father's seconds."

There was a moment's silence before Valiant spoke again. When he did his voice was steady, though drops had sprung to his forehead. "Was there any circumstance in that meeting that might be construed as reflecting on his—honor?"

"Good God, no!" said the major explosively.

"On his bearing as a gentleman?"

There was a hiatus this time in which he could hear his heart beat. In that single exclamation the major seemed to have exhausted his vocabulary. He was looking at the ground. It was the doctor who spoke at last, in a silence that to the man in the doorway weighed like a hundred atmospheres.

"No!" he said bluntly. "Certainly not. What put that into your head?"

When he was alone in the library Valiant opened the glass door and took from the shelf the morocco case. The old shiver of repugnance ran over him at the very touch of the leather. In the farthest corner was a low commode. He set the case on this and moved the big tapestry screen across the angle, hiding it from view.

* * * * * * *

In the great hall at Damory Court the candles in their brass wall-sconces blinked back from the polished parquetry and the shining fire-dogs, filling the rather solemn gloom with an air of warmth and creature-comfort. Leaning against the newel-post, Valiant gazed about him. How different it all looked from the night of his coming!

He began to walk up and down the floor, teasing pricks of restlessness urging him. He opened the door and passed into the unlighted dining-room. On the sideboard set a silver loving-cup that had arrived the day before in a huge box with his books and knick-knacks. He had won it at polo. He lifted it, fingering its carved handles. He remembered that when that particular score had been made, Katharine Fargo had sat in one of the drags at the side-line.

But the memory evoked no thrill. Instead, the thought of her palely-cold, passionless beauty called up another mobile thoroughbred face instinct with quick flashings of mirth and hauteur. Again he felt the fierce clutch of small fingers, as they fought with his in that struggle for his life. Each line of that face stood before him—the arching brows, the cameo-delicacy of profile, the magnolia skin and hair like a brown-gold cloud across the sun.

He stepped down to the graveled drive and followed it to the gate, then, bareheaded, took the Red Road. Along this highway he had rattled in Uncle Jefferson's crazy hack—with her red rose in his hand. The musky scent of the pressed leaves in the book in his pocket seemed to be all about him.

The odor of living roses, in fact, was in the air. It came on the scarce-felt breeze, a heavy calling perfume. He walked on, keeping the road by the misty infiltrating shimmer of the stars, with a sensation rather of gliding than of walking. It occurred to him that if, as scientists say, colors emit sound-tones, scents also should possess a music of their own: the honeysuckle fragrance, maybe—soft mellow fluting as of diminutive wind-instruments; the far-faint sickly odor of lilies—the upper register of faery violins; this spicy breath of roses—blending, throbbing chords like elfin echoes of an Italian harp. The fancy pleased him; he could imagine the perfume now in the air carried with it an under-music, like a ghostly harping.

It came to him at the same instant that this was no mere fancy. Somewhere in the languorous night a harp was being played. He paused and listened intently, then went on toward the sound. The rose scent had grown stronger; it was almost in that heavy air, as if he were breasting an etherial sea of attar. He felt as if he were treading on a path of rose-leaves, down which the increasing melody flowed crimsonly to him, calling, calling.

He stopped stock-still. He had been skirting a close-cropped hedge of box. This had ended abruptly and he was looking straight up a bar of green-yellow radiance from a double doorway. The latter opened on a porch and the light, flung across this, drenched an arbor of climbing roses, making it stand out a mass of woven rubies set in emerald.

He drew a long sigh of more than delight, for framed in the doorway he saw a figure in misty white, leaning to the gilded upright of a harp. He knew at once that it was Shirley. Holding his breath, he came closer, his feet muffled in the thick grass. He stood in the dense obscurity, one hand gripping the gnarled limb of a catalpa, his eyes following the shapely arms from wrist to shoulder, the fingers straying across the strings, the bending cheek caressing the carved wood. She was playing the melody of Shelley's "Indian Serenade"—touching the chords softly and tenderly—and his lips moved, molding themselves soundlessly to the words.

The serenade died in a single long note. As if in answer to it there rose a flood of bird-music from beyond the arbor—jets of song that swelled and rippled to a soaring melody. She heard it, too, for the gracile fingers fell from the strings. She listened a moment, with head held to one side, then sprang up and came through the door and down the steps.

He hesitated a moment, then a single stride took him from the shadow.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Beyond the Box-Hedge.

As he greeted her, his gaze plunged deep into hers. She had recoiled a step, startled, to recognize him almost instantly. He noted the shrinking and thought it due to a stabbing memory of that forest-horror. His first words were prosaic enough:

"I'm an unconscionable trespasser," he said. "It must seem awfully prowly, but I didn't realize I was on private property till I passed the hedge there."

As her hand lay in his, a strange fancy stirred in him: in that wood-meeting she had seemed something witch-like, the wilful spirit of the passionate spring herself, mixed of her aerial essences and jungle wildernesses; in this scented dim-lit close she was grave-eyed, subdued, a paler pensive woman of under-half-guessed sadnesses and haunting moods. With her answer, however, this gravity seemed to slip from her like a garment. She laughed lightly.

"I love to prowl myself. I think sometimes I like the night better than the day. I believe in one of my incarnations I must have been a panther."

They both laughed. "I'm growing superstitious about flowers," he said. "You know a rose figured in our first meeting. And in our last—"

She shrank momentarily. "The cape jessamines! I shall always think of that when I see them!"

"Ah, forgive me!" he begged. "But when I remember what you did—for me! Oh, I know! But for you, I must have died."

"But for me you wouldn't have been bitten. But don't let's talk of it." She shivered suddenly.

DROVE THE CAT TO SUICIDE

Representative Probably Did a Little Thinking After He Had Heard Policeman's Story.

"Alfalfa Bill" Murray, representative from Oklahoma, made a tour of Washington a short time ago with a party of friends. In due time they reached the Washington monument, and the Oklahoma statesman told at length of the beauties of the shaft.

At the close of his peroration, Alfalfa Bill mopped his brow and turned genially to a minion of the law nearby.

"How about it," asked he; "isn't that some little talk on this ancient pile of masonry?"

"You forgot about the cat," replied that official, imperturbably.

"What cat?"

"The brindled cat of 1896."

"Well, what about him?" queried Representative Murray.

"Oh, nothing," replied the guard, evasively.

"See here," said Mr. Murray, sternly, "I demand to know about this cat."

"It ain't much of a story," replied the guard. "Your talking there reminded me of it. Y'see this here cat lived in the monument. Well, sir, me and another chap that used to be here noticed that cat acting queerly every time a party came along and was told about the beauties of 'this vast pile of masonry,' as you was saying.

"Then one day along came a gent with some friends and talked for three-quarters of an hour along this line, when blamed if that there cat didn't run all the way up 500 odd feet of steps and commit suicide by jumping off the top of the monument."—Washington Post.

Some Mushroom.

Epicures in the United States, who love mushrooms will long for a time in the Austrian Tyrol, where real mushrooms grow. A traveler writing of the region says: Bordering the road that led up the mountain were Italian chestnut trees, so large that it took from three to five of us to span the trunks of most of them. Under one of these one evening I saw crouching what I took to be a small, dark gray kitten. Stooping, I found that it was not a kitten, but a mushroom. Our good peasant neighbor, hurrying toward me, begged that I would not disturb it, saying that she depended on this every year. After a few days of rain, what had seemed a kitten now looked a stately cat and when it reached the weight of six pounds it was gathered and eaten.

DEATHS.

Mrs. Susan Hoy, widow of Joseph Hoy, died at State College, Saturday morning, after an illness dating from early last fall. Interment was made at Pine Hall on Tuesday forenoon, and the services were conducted by Rev. L. Stoy Spangler of the Lutheran church, Pine Grove.

Mrs. Hoy's maiden name was Wolf, a daughter of John Wolf, who many years ago lived in the vicinity of Rebersburg. He died when quite a young man, and his twelve children were placed in homes of friends and relatives of the family. Mrs. Hoy was reared by George Shaffer of Madisonburg. The greater part of her married life was spent in College township. She was well advanced in years, and it was age that brought on the illness that caused her death.

Mrs. Hoy is survived by three children, namely: Newton and William, State College; J. Emory, Philadelphia. Mrs. Harvey Corman, Rebersburg, and Mrs. Solomon Peck, Nittany, are sisters, and Charles Wolf, located in the west, is a brother of the deceased.

Mrs. Sarah Houtz died at her bome two miles northeast of Rebersburg early Sunday morning from diseases incident to old age, being at the time of her death seventy-five years old. The funeral services took place this (Thursday) morning in the Evangelical church and interment was made at Rebersburg, Rev. J. W. Rumberger officiating.

Mrs. Houtz was the widow of the late Berjamin Houtz who preceded her to the grave fifteen years ago Ten children survive, nearly all of whom are located in remote parts. One sister also survives.

A dashing rain fell early Wednesday afternoon. There was much thunder and lightning for a time and hailstones as large as marbles covered the ground. Temperature fell fifteen to twenty degrees.

Mrs. H. J. Cronshore, wife of Rev. Mr. Cronshore of Freeburg, received injuries which will no doubt prove fatal when their automobile upset on a hill and both were caught under the wreckage. She sustained internal injuries and a broken arm while Mr. Cronshore escaped with minor injuries.

George W. Bradford and D. C. Keller had a rather serious mishap a week ago while on the way to Mifflin county. The horse frightened, spilled the occupants from the buggy, and ran away. Mr. Keller was cut about the face, but his injuries were not serious. The buggy was pretty badly damaged.

The large funeral cortege which accompanied the body of Miss Mary Rhoda Potter to its last resting place spoke for the respect in which she was held. Among others from a distance were these: Mrs. Margaret Hutchinson and Mrs. Irvin, Bellefonte; Abram Miller, Pleasant Gap; and George Harshbarger, Nittany.

The president of the National Cloak and Skirt Makers' association is authority for the statement that next fall will see all the freak styles in women's dress gone. The change to more rational garments and headgear is even now well on the way. He adds that by the time snow flies again no man will be ashamed to see his wife or daughter dressed in the height of fashion.

Mrs. Maria Wagner of Tusseyville, and her only sister, Mrs. Carrie Carver, are guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Kedlin in Centre Hall. Mrs. Wagner and Mrs. Carver were Pauleys before marriage, and are natives of Potter township. The latter left the old home in the vicinity of Tusseyville forty-seven years ago, and this is her first visit since to the home of her youth. She is now a widow, and makes her home with her children living in California, Idaho and Nebraska.

A number of the county officials were out on Sunday to see the country. Prothonatory D. R. Foreman and family drove to Centre Hall and Farmers Mills to be with friends, and Recorder Francis Speer invited Messrs. Robert Morris, Forrest Tanner and Earl C. Musser to accompany him on a trip to Lewistown, where Mr. Speer has a sister living. This little company was enjoying itself very much and was on schedule time to a point on the Long Mountain, where the car in which they were traveling balked. It was not a convenient point for such a happening, for it is miles to the nearest telephone or a farmer's garage. The car was carefully looked over, and each member gave his own version of the cause of the sudden halt when finally they resolved themselves a jury to pass on Mr. Speer's statement that the "dog-gone thing played out," and so it was decided. A Lewistown car carried them to their destination.

APPROVE THE REPEALER.

Thirty-three Pennsylvania Delegates to Baltimore Convention So Declare in Writing.

An officer of the Democratic National Committee, Thomas J. Pence, has completed a canvass of the members of Pennsylvania's delegation to the Democratic National Convention at Baltimore with regard to the tolls exemption provision of the Panama Canal act, which was indorsed in one section of the platform adopted there, but condemned by the anti-ship subsidy declaration. He has received letters from 33 of the delegates indorsing the demand of President Wilson for the repeal of the exemption.

The reply of Charles R. Kurtz, now Collector of the Port of Philadelphia, who was a delegate at large to this convention, embodies the thought of almost every expression, and is given in full:

ADOPTION PERFUNCTORY.

"When the platform was read, I do not believe one-third of the delegates heard or understood what was in the document. It was approved by the convention in a perfunctory manner in the belief that there was not an un-Democratic clause in it. In the campaign that followed the question of free toll for American vessels passing through the Panama Canal was practically overlooked. Since this question has become a great issue, and the meaning of that plank for free tolls is understood by the public to be actually granting a subsidy to the shipping interests, the Democracy realizes that the Panama tolls plank was a 'joker,' injected in the platform by special interests, and that it literally committed the party, without proper deliberation or discussion, to a wrong policy.

"Having been a victim of the activities of designing individuals and special interests in the adoption of this plank, it now is imperative that when the Democratic party discovers such a grave error, that it immediately and without any hesitancy corrects the same. The Panama Canal was built by public funds. Free tolls to American ships is piscing a tax on the public for the benefit of a few ship owners. It is a dangerous species of class legislation; it is a subsidy, which is hostile to Democratic doctrine. Because we erred in our platform, does not forever commit us to a mistaken policy. President Wilson is absolutely right in his position on the Panama tolls question. Every loyal Democrat and good citizen should uphold him in this contest."

Miss Mary Potter in her will gave her brother J. T. Potter, in Centre Hall, four sixths of all the real estate and all her personal property. The remaining real estate was divided equally between her brothers, Henry and John F.

Aaronsburg.

Mrs. Detwiler of Altoona is spending an indefinite time with her children, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Reinbaugh.

Clymer Stover, a delegate from Lewistown to the Rebersburg Classis, was the welcome guest at the home of his sister, Mrs. George I. Weaver.

Mr. and Mrs. Newton Kurtz and two boys, came in their Ford car from Mifflinburg on Sunday to partake of a grand dinner with their cousin, Mr. and Mrs. Luther E. Stover; also called on their aged aunt, Mrs. L. K. Lenker, who enjoyed their call very much.

We have quite a dry spell. Farmers can't plow which will make it late for the corn.

Mrs. Paul Stover and her bright little daughter from Williamsport, spent a day with her father-in-law, A. S. Stover, Esq.

Mrs. William Marr of Philipsburg and her granddaughter, Edna Stull, from Eagleville, are spending a few weeks with the former lady's aged mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Weaver.

Miss Mary Rieff and sister, also her nurse, from Harrisburg, came to spend the hot summer months in their cottage home.

Mrs. Jacob Feidler, who had been confined to her bed for the last few weeks with lung trouble, her many friends are glad to say, is now able to sit up for a short time each day.

Wm. Houser and his daughter, Catharine, spent a day with his mother-in-law, Mrs. L. K. Lenker. They came in their Overland from Bellefonte.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl McClintic from Lock Haven, are the welcome guests of the former's brother-in-law, J. Hal. Crouse.

Mrs. J. P. Coburn from Bellefonte spent a few days in her palatial home. On Friday J. W. Foster and sister took her to the county seat in their Overland.

Rev. W. D. Donat, of the St. Peter Reformed charge, is at present at Rebersburg, where he is attending Classis.

Monday the Lutheran Conference opened and will continue a few days. Rev. Geesey is quite busy to get every thing in good shape.

Mr. Carner and Aunt Beckie Charles from Hublersburg were entertained by Mrs. Effie Weaver. This is the lady's former home and she was a very welcome guest, and her many friends were all glad to shake hands with her.

Fire Company Meeting.

All members of the local fire company are requested to meet in the regular session of that body Tuesday evening in the council room. In order to maintain the low rate of insurance on property which property owners have enjoyed since the organization of this body it is necessary that certain requirements be met which the fire insurance underwriters' association demand. It is to make sure that the local organization is up to the standard that all members are urged to be present.

Southern Jubilee Entertainers

The Southern Jubilee Entertainers will give an entertainment in the Grange Hall, Thursday evening, June 4th, under the auspices of the M. E. church.

The company consists of Prof. G. A Morris and Miss Estella M. Walker, a refined duet of colored talent. The former is a baritone singer, lecturer, entertainer and humorist, and has earned the distinction of being "The man who has made thousands of hearts rejoice." The latter is a mezzo soprano who at once endears herself to her audience by reason of her winning personality. She makes a specialty of singing the old southern melodies.

These people's reputation is not confined to the United States, but extends into Canada and the European countries.

Grange Arcadia, Thursday, June 4th.

Growth of School of Agriculture

There is probably no other school in the United States that can show such a remarkable growth in the number of students in the last ten years, as the School of Agriculture at Pennsylvania State College. During that period the number of students multiplied more than fifteen times. The growth has been continuous every year.

For the year 1904-05, the total number of students was 73. The following year it was increased to ninety-four; 1906-07 showed an enrollment of 111; 1907 08, of 202; 1908-09, of 337; 1909-10, of 479; 1910-11, of 638; 1911-12, of 824; 1912-13, of 968; 1913 14 of 1125.

This remarkable increase in the demand for the benefits of the School of Agriculture is highly creditable both to the institution and to the students who have taken advantage of the facilities it offers for scientific instruction in agriculture. It was largely due to the self-sacrifice and professional enthusiasm of the teaching force, without any special provision for the purpose. Until within the last year or so, the instructors have gone all over the State carrying the benefits of the school to the farmers, their sons and daughters, who could not go themselves to the school. The more they have done, the more familiar the public has become with the kind of instructions to be got at the School of Agriculture the greater the demand has been upon its resources.

One of the greatest problems before the American people is how to increase the quantity of farm products. It is now generally understood that the sure way and practically the only way to do this, is to increase the production of the farms by better methods of agriculture, and that this is to be accomplished only by scientific education.

In spite of these facts Pennsylvania whose agricultural lands are not surpassed in any State in the Union has been under political machine control, disgracefully remiss in its failure to provide buildings, equipment and teaching force for the School of Agriculture, so that it could meet the demands upon it.

Greatly as the enrollment has increased during the last ten years, it would have been far greater if the school had been able to accommodate all who wanted to enjoy its benefits.

There has been improvement in this respect very recently, but the farmers of the State should see to it that better provision should be made for the growth and maintenance for State College than ever before. The revenues of the State will be ample when waste and extravagance and the payment of grossly excessive salaries to political henchmen have been stopped, as we confidently expect that they will be after a new legislature is installed and a new administration inaugurated next January.

Remote Origin of Alcohol.

No one knows when alcohol was first made. It is commonly taught that it was first distilled by the Arabians about the tenth century, but there is little doubt that they obtained the secret from Italian doctors, who had long been practicing it. Paul Richter, in a recent number of the Berliner Klinische Wochenschrift, shows that a knowledge of "aqua ardens," or "burning water," may be traced as far back as the second century A. D., to a Christian father named Hippolytus, who possessed a recipe analogous to those handed about during the middle ages.

Origin of Billiards in Doubt.

Billiards is believed by some to have been brought from the east by the Crusaders, while others claim an English origin for it and find it allied to the game of bowls. Still others assert that the French developed it from an ancient German game. It seems pretty certain that the first person to give form and rule to the game was an artist named Henrique Devigne, who lived in the reign of Charles IX. One writer sees in billiards the ancient game of paille-maille played on a table instead of on the ground, and this is indeed a very reasonable assumption.

The Tunes They Used to Play

Thanks be to God for the victory blest;
From havoc of war surcease,
The drum and the fife bring thoughts of the strife,
But flowers bring dreams of peace.

Absolutely Indivisible Union Their Monument

GETTYSBURG has an immortal place in history, because it was there that one of the greatest battles of the world was fought; it was there that the greatest conflict of the Civil war occurred; it was there that took place the only engagement north of the Mason and Dixon line; it was there, it has been conceded, that the Confederacy met its most effectual check, for from that time on its fate, though delayed, was certain, and it is for these and other reasons it is fitting that it should be there that private and public bounty should be more generous in perpetuating the memories of that field of carnage than any other of that great strife between brothers.

It ministers to the pride of one as well as saves that of the other that the turning point in that terrific struggle between the states should be located on the north of that historic line which divided the slave states from the commonwealth. To the North it means an invasion by the foe effectually repelled, while to the South there is consolation in the fact that the decisive battle of the war which sealed their fate was not fought on the battle-scarred soil of the Old Dominion.

It was mostly young men and boys who battled there, for the majority of the men who fought that war on both sides were young men. It was not an army of old men that stormed the heights; it was not old men who filled the graves on every southern battlefield, but the bodies in those graves are those of young men, cut off in the beginning of life, and we should realize the depth of the sacrifice they made, and cherish the acquaintance and friendship of those of them who are with us yet, because in a very few years they will all be gone to join their comrades in the cold earth.

In view of the heroic achievements of the Union defenders, it is worthy of passing notice to quote from the speech of Professor Stockton Axson, who was the principal speaker at an annual dinner of the New York Southern society:

"We members of the Southern society have no apology to make for our fathers; none whatever. We of the South have come to love a greater country now, but I am sure that we feel that our southern soldiers, as much as our northern soldiers, had their part in making (note the word) this forever absolutely indivisible Union. I like to feel that General Lee and General Grant both had their part in building an indestructible structure on the foundation Washington laid."

That the new South has come to love a greater country now is a matter of fervent rejoicing to every lover of his native heath and it is as fervently hoped that this love for the flag of our reunited country will soon be evidenced by Old Glory being unfurled to the southern breezes over every public school during each school day and over every municipal, county, state and federal building in the South.

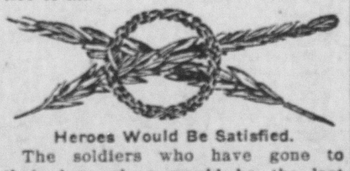
God be thanked there is a new South which has awakened to the dawn of its promise and to the manifold blessings of the new era of our national life which was fought for and preserved by their erstwhile Union foes.

It is eminently fitting that we as a great people, should be filled with gratitude on each recurring Memorial day as we recount the heroic achievements of our Union defenders, both living and dead. All hats off as the survivors of this valiant army pass by in measured tread as, with muffled drum, they march to and tenderly strew with beautiful flowers, the silent tents of green in which sleep their fallen comrades.

May we all share in these tributes of love, honor and gratitude by contributing our choicest flowers and immortelles so that not one grave may remain forgotten or uncovered. Let us spend the day as befits a national Sabbath and refrain from all unseemly sport during the solemn and impressive ceremonies.

Let us honor the veterans and ourselves by attending the patriotic exercises which are usually held throughout the land, and last, but not least, let us consecrate our lives to the perpetuation of the principles of union, liberty and equal justice to all, for which they so nobly and bravely offered their lives on the country's altar.

Then when all the sounds and clamor of the earth shall be stilled, and when the bells of heaven shall ring in commemoration of the deathless fame of the American soldier the archangel on high will proclaim far and wide: "Enter thou, too, all good American citizens, into the sanctuary of the Lord for you have fought a good fight in the name of truth, liberty, morality, progress and equal justice to all."



Heroes Would Be Satisfied.

The soldiers who have gone to their long sleep would be the last to ask that the full tide of life be checked or in any sense perverted or darkened on the holiday dedicated to their deeds and their memory. All that they would desire, were they where they might speak to their countrymen today, is the right spirit of patriotism, the right loyalty to all that is just and honorable and worthy of the nation's splendid story. And that they would find in the hearts and souls of the American people in larger measure than ever before.

The Unknown Heroes

BRING garlands for the heroes who were denied renown,
Who marched, sorefooted, 'neath the scorching sun,
For those who dug the trenches and pulled the ramparts down,
Who fought the fights their proud commanders won.

Bring garlands for the heroes who hurried to obey,
Who dared not question why nor wait in doubt,
Whose blood sank in the hollows where dread sounds died away,
From which the smoke of battle drifted out.

Bring garlands for the heroes who did not fear to die
And give them honor for the part they bore;
If no tall shafts are gleaming to show us where they lie,
They, too, gave all for honor, and who may offer more?

—Henry Howland.

REMARKABLE CASE of Mrs. HAM

Declares Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Saved Her Life and Sanity.

Shamrock, Mo.— "I feel it my duty to tell the public the condition of my health before using your medicine. I had falling, inflammation and congestion, female weakness, pains in both sides, backaches and bearing down pains, was short of memory, nervous, impatient, passed sleepless nights, and had neither strength nor energy. There was always a fear and dread in my mind, I had cold, nervous, weak spells, hot flashes over my body. I had a place in my right side that was so sore that I could hardly bear the weight of my clothes. I tried medicines and doctors, but they did me little good, and I never expected to get out again. I got Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier, and I certainly would have been in grave or in an asylum if your medicines had not saved me. But now I can work all day, sleep well at night, eat anything I want, have no hot flashes or weak, nervous spells. All pains, aches, fears and dreads are gone, my house, children and husband are no longer neglected, as I am almost entirely free of the bad symptoms I had before taking your remedies, and all is pleasure and happiness in my home."—Mrs. JOSIE HAM, R. GOOD FOR POLAR EXPLORERS

Frenchman's Invention of Much Benefit to Those Who Track Waste Places of the Earth.

Count Bertrand de Lessups, son of the famous Frenchman of Suez canal fame, has constructed an air-propelled machine which is capable of attaining a speed of from fifteen to sixty miles an hour over the snow, according to the condition of the frozen roads. The shoe-shaped chassis is attached to broad, flat metal runners, and vibration is reduced to a minimum by the addition of strong springs. The propeller behind the pilot is well guarded by a metal screen as a protection against any one approaching it closely. When snow falls wheels are placed on the projecting pins, which lift the ski from the ground, and the car will then attain a speed of nearly one hundred miles an hour. Some such machine as this is to be taken into the antarctic regions by Shackleton with his forthcoming expedition. Abroad this form of amusement is called aeroskiing.

Sizing Up Louis.

There recently came to a fashionable shoe shop in Chicago a daughter of a man whose wealth has been acquired within very recent years. The young woman was disposed to patronize the clerk, and rejected a number of "classy" slippers he produced for her approval. Finally she said:

"I think, perhaps, I shall take these two pairs. But Louis XV heels are too high for me. Give me a size lower—or, stay—perhaps Louis XIII will be high enough."—Harper's.

MIGHT BE THE DESIRED ONE

Masher Not Entirely Out of It, If He Would Accept the Situation as It Was.

He was one of those insufferable young pests who patronize restaurants trying to flirt with stenographers and telephone girls who drop in about noon for lunch. Approaching a young woman who was sitting alone, he lifted his hat and said suavely:

"I beg your pardon, miss."

"Well?" interrogated the girl calmly.

"Why, er—you see, it is this way. I made an engagement with a young lady whom I have never seen to meet me here. Now, are you waiting for me?"

The girl smiled queerly.

"I might be waiting for you," she said.

"Ah! Indeed," responded the masher, delightedly.

"Yes. You see, I ordered lobster and it hasn't come yet."

DISFIGURED WITH PIMPLES

R. F. D. No. 2, Box 46, Matthews, Ga.—"For three years or more I was troubled with pimples and blackheads. At first my face would itch and burn and then the pimples would break out. They looked almost as if I had measles, causing great disfigurement. They would make my face very red and sore. Then they festered and came to a head and large boils would come on my chin and nose.

"I also had dandruff which caused my scalp to itch and burn. It itched and burned so that I had to scratch it until it was irritated. The dandruff scaled off and showed plainly in my hair. It also caused my hair to break off and become very thin. I used several remedies which did not cure and gave but little relief. After I received a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment I began using them according to directions. I secured two cakes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment, which cured me perfectly." (Signed) Miss Willie M. Walker, July 31, 1912.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address postcard "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston."—Adv.

Gave Hecklers a Chance.

At one time the Republicans of Chicago were out and were fighting Democracy on industrial conditions and the putative helplessness of a situation which did not let the Republicans in. A parade had started off and was well on its way—nearly to the file closers—when a ward boss saw that two lighted transparencies lacked carriers. He looked around hurriedly and noticed that one of his retainers was idle. "Here," he yelled, "shoulder this and get in line." The shanghaied recruit was a gambler who busied himself in ward politics on occasions, but for the most stuck to his trade when trade was possible. As he hoisted the lighted legend, "Open up the mills and factories," there was a chorus of derisive yells from the sidewalk: "Never mind the mills. Open up the poker games."

Shakespeare and Bacon.

It has not been proven that Bacon wrote the plays known as Shakespeare's. The various attempts at such task have all turned out to be melancholy failures. It has been shown that there are many difficulties in the way of believing that the historical Shakespeare wrote the immortal dramas, but it has not been shown that anybody else wrote them. The Stratford man is still in possession of the glory of their authorship, and if he is not entitled to the honor it is impossible to say who is.

"Their Memory Grows Brighter With the Years"

MEMORIAL day to day, with its wealth of heroic and sacred memories, bears deeper significance to every true American than at any time since it was first promulgated in May, 1868, by Gen. John A. Logan, then commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic. Today the button inspires more love, veneration, and national pride for the Union defender, both living and dead, than it ever did before.

Think of what is inscribed within the compass of that little unassuming bronze button so proudly worn by the Union soldier, sailor and marine. What a flood of heroic and self-sacrificing memories burst upon us as we beheld it upon one of the great and mighty survivors of the greatest war that the world has ever fought.

Grant.

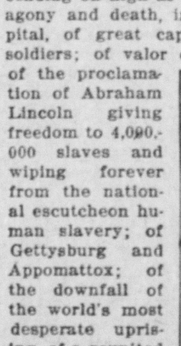
That button—and who wouldn't give all that he has, is and hopes to be for the proud honor of being eligible to wear one of them — has inscribed upon it in living characters the matchless and valorous deeds of Grant and Sherman and Lincoln; of Sheridan, Thomas and Logan; of Custer and Meade and Farragut and Porter; the history of the campaigns of the armies of the Potomac, of the Cumberland and of the West; of the march to the sea, of Vicksburg, of Forts Henry and Donelson; of Atlanta, of the Wilderness, of Winchester, of Chickamauga, Corinth and Antietam; of sieges and battles and skirmish lines; of days of daring and nights of waking; of weary marches by day and by night, in cold, and storm, and heat; of parting of lovers and maidens; of farewells of husbands and wives; of prayers and blessings from fireside and camp, ascending on high as divine incense; of agony and death, in prison and hospital, of great captains and heroic soldiers; of valor on sea and land; of the proclamation of Abraham Lincoln giving freedom to 4,000,000 slaves and wiping forever from the national escutcheon human slavery; of Gettysburg and Appomattox; of the downfall of the world's most desperate uprising, of a reunited country and the perpetuity of our glorious Union with its unspeakable blessings that are the nation's forever.

Sherman.

This record shall never fade away. It shall grow brighter and brighter as the years go by, scattering sparks of inspiration among the generations as they come and go.

Lincoln, Grant and the Union forces fought for national supremacy, for a greater and enduring nationality and maintained that our Union of States was indissoluble. Davis, Lee and their followers fought for state sovereignty and held that the Union of the states was merely a compact that could be dissolved at will.

Lincoln and Grant believed that this country could not long live and flourish by being half free and half slave. Davis, Lee and all others who fought to destroy our flag believed slavery was kin to a divine right, and that any state should be permitted to maintain and extend barter in slaves if it so wished to do.



Sheridan.

These were vital issues in the conflict. These were the issues that divided our nation so bitterly and woefully, and drew forth more bravery, fortitude, hardships, privations, blood carnage and suffering on either side of the conflict than the world had ever seen before, and, may we hope, ever will see again.

Behold our country today! Behold the realization of the prophecies of Lincoln and his valiant host of seers and undaunted patriots. How greatly did they prophesy and labor for the land they held so dear. Truly they wrought greater than they then knew or hoped for. Truly they must have been inspired, guided and protected from on high.

Nation's Dead at Arlington

TO a generation that knows not war it sometimes is difficult to realize that there is love of country so great that men will leave wife and children and parents, leave home and its comforts and business and its promises and endure hardships, suffering and death inself that that country may endure.

That there is such a patriotism a Memorial day spent at Arlington, the National cemetery near Washington, is an impressive reminder. For the men who had that great love and upheld it with their lives lie there in the last bivouac, unmindful of the flowers which strew their resting places.

Arlington, never at any time to be visited without emotions that are felt by the most impassive, is doubly a place for reflection Memorial day. Twenty thousand men who offered their lives for their country are buried there, and on each grave on Memorial day is planted a flag, and at each headstone lies at least one wreath of flowers. Sixteen thousand graves, row on row in military precision, are ranged on a great level plateau called "The Field of the Dead," and the dullest heart is stirred, the slowest pulse beats more quickly, at the sight of those 16,000 little flags fluttering in the breeze.

At the head of each grave is a simple stone bearing the name of the soldier and his number in the Roll of Honor, the roster kept by the war department of those who died in the service of their country. This Roll of Honor bears 250,000 names.

Tomb of the Unknown Dead.

But not all those who gave up their lives for an ideal have the poor reward of a headstone and a number. Hundreds of bodies, gathered from fields over which the contending armies struggled, were never identified. All of these were laid in one common grave under a massive monument to "the Unkonwn Dead." On the face of the monument is inscribed:

BENEATH THIS STONE

Repose the bones of 2,111 unknown soldiers gathered after the war from the fields of Bull Run and the route to the Rappahannock. Their remains could not be identified, but their names and deaths are recorded in the archives of their country, and its grateful citizens honor them as their noble army of martyrs. May they rest in peace.

In its effect, perhaps, the most impressive feature of the Memorial day program at Arlington is the placing of a small American flag on each and every grave of this silent camp ground. Uncle Sam provides and stores in the basement of Arlington mansion a sufficient quantity of flags, 10 by 14 inches in size, to provide an emblem for each grave, and these mementoes are put in place by members of the G. A. R. posts and remain in position for a week following Memorial day. There are now about 22,200 persons buried in Arlington and, save in the officers' section, the graves are ranged in long rows, having a precision suggestive of military discipline, so that the spectacle of this vast array of waving flags is bound to be deeply moving to every spectator who has an atom of sentiment in his makeup.

THE SOLDIER BOY.

The man who wears the shoulder straps
and has his sword in hand,
Who proudly strides along in front, looks good and brave and grand;
But marching in the ranks somewhere—
just where I cannot see—
With his gun upon his shoulder, is the soldier boy for me.

The man who wears the shoulder straps
is handsome, brave and true;
But there are other handsome boys, and other brave ones, too!
When there are heights that must be won, while bullets fill the air,
'Tis not the officer alone who braves the dangers there.

The man who wears the shoulder straps
is cheered along the way,
And public honor dulls his dread of falling in the fray;
But, there behind him in the ranks, and moving like a part
Of some machine, is many a man with just as brave a heart.

The man who wears the shoulder straps
deserves the people's praise;
I honor and applaud him for the splendid part he plays;
But, back there in the ranks somewhere, stout-hearted, true, is he—Prepared to do and nerved to dare—the soldier boy for me.

—Henry Howland.

DEMAND IS FOR ABLE MAN

High Positions Waiting for Those Who Are Competent Properly to Fill Them.

We know a big firm in one of the oldest and most important industries in this country which has been hunting for over a yeyar for a man to whom to pay $15,000, and they cannot find him, writes the editor of the American Machinist.

We know an executive who wants two or three men as assistants; if he could find them in his plant he would gladly pay them $40 a week. He has tried a considerable number in these positions during the past year, but without success as yet. He feels that he is positively hampered by the lack of them.

We know that there is an active demand for $2,000 men, and we can readily believe that there is a keen demand for $10,000 men.

It is remarkable that in a plant employing, say a thousand men, there are so few who raise themselves above their fellows far enough to be conspicuous to the management. And even, of those few, not all have the initiative, the ginger, and faculty of being thorough that would make them of value as assistants to the executive. What a god-send to the engineer is the draughtsman who can do his own thinking, and dig out the solution of a problem somehow without constant prodding and pointing from the boss!

Deep Breathing.

"Learn to sit or stand erect and breathe deep," says a health expert. "Remember that your blood cannot be properly washed with half a lungful of air any more than you can take a proper bath in a few pints of water."

Everybody must know what a joy there is in the deep breathing of the pure air of the morning. The lungs respond to the stimulus much as the body reacts from a dash of cold water.

The trouble with the man of few words is that he is apt to use them until they become tiresome.

DID THE WORK
Grew Strong on Right Food.

You can't grow strong by merely exercising. You must have food—the kind you can digest and assimilate.

Unless the food you eat is digested it adds to the burden the digestive organs have naturally to carry. This often means a nervous breakdown.

"About a year ago," writes a Mass. lady, "I had quite a serious nervous breakdown caused, as I believed, by overwork and worry. I also suffered untold misery from dyspepsia.

"First I gave up my position, then I tried to find a remedy for my troubles, something that would make me well and strong, something to rest my tired stomach and build up my worn-out nerves and brain.

"I tried one kind of medicine after another, but nothing seemed to help me.

"Finally a friend suggested change of food and recommended Grape-Nuts. With little or no faith in it, I tried a package. That was eight months ago and I have never been without it since.

"Grape-Nuts did the work. It helped me grow strong and well. Grape-Nuts put new life into me, built up my whole system and made another woman of me!"

"In my country," said the stranger from across the border, "we would call it a seven-day pitched battle!"

DEATHS.

Miss Mary Potter died on the old Potter homestead one and one fourth miles east of Linden Hall, Thursday night of last week at nine o'clock. The direct cause of her death was heart trouble but for four weeks prior to her demise she suffered greatly from arterial rheumatism. She became somewhat better under the careful attention of a trained nurse and a week before her death visited with relatives in Boalsburg.

The funeral was held Monday morning at nine o'clock, and burial was made in the family burial plot at Centre Hill, Rev. W. H. Schuyler, of the Presbyterian church, officiating.

Miss Potter was the daughter of Joshua and Mary A. Potter and was born on the Potter homestead November 4, 1845, making her age sixty-seven years and six months. Her mother was Mary A. Taylor of Kishacoquillas, Mifflin county. The old homestead has been in the Potter possession for over one hundred and ten years, and was the birthplace of the deceased's father. It was there that Fergus Potter, a brother, passed away about two months ago.

Miss Potter identified herself with the Presbyterian church in her early childhood and her entire life was one of christian character and conscientiousness.

Surviving her are the following brothers and sister: J. F. Potter, of Philadelphia; R. H. Potter, on the old homestead; Mrs. E. A. Kent, of Brooklyn, Pa.; and J. T. Potter, of Centre Hall.

William B. Shirk died at a hospital in Atlantic City on Saturday morning, after an illness of some duration. Interment was made in that city, where the remains of his wife and son are interred, on Monday. The only survivor of the family is a daughter, Miss Rebs, who is located in Brooklyn. She visited her father the day previous to his death, and was then told that he could live but a short time.

Mr. Shirk was a native of Potter township, and was the son of Joseph Shirk. He served in the Civil War, having enlisted in Company G, 210th Regiment. About fifteen years ago he moved from Centre Hall to Atlantic City, where he was employed by the city electric light company.

A twin sister, Mrs. L. Ruble, Cleveland, Ohio, and a brother, Harry E. Shirk, of Centre Hall, survive the deceased.

Baseball Game.

Saturday afternoon on Grange Park Centre Hall will cross bats with their old friendly rival, Millheim. It will be the first game of the season and undoubtedly a good one. Be there.

The Charles William Stores, New York, a mail order house, sent the Reporter a fourteen inch advertisement, accompanied by a check at the regular rate of advertising, to run for a month, with the promise of future business. The check was returned, and for the reason that the Reporter believes local business men should have the trade of this community. Is there a business man in this section who will step up and occupy the space denied the mail order house? Step lively, Mr. Business Man.

PENNSYLVANIA'S LAST ELK.

The Honor of Slaying Last Noble Animal is Credited to Captain John Decker of Decker Valley.

The following article is taken from the Altoona Tribune, and the honor of killing Pennsylvania's last native elk is wrested from Jim Jacobson of Potter county and given to Captain John Decker of Decker Valley, through the efforts made by Hon. H. W. Shoemaker to place credit to the rightfull hunter.

Until a short time ago it was conceded that Jim Jacobson, the half-breed Indian, had killed the last Pennsylvania elk in Potter county, in 1875. This exploit has been told and retold so many times that it is like a household word to every lover of outdoor sport in Pennsylvania. A short time ago the writer of this article heard of an elk having been killed in the Seven Mountains in 1877. The slayer was his old time friend, the venerable Captain John Decker, of Decker Valley.

Every one in the Seven Mountains knows Captain Decker. For half a century he has been prominent in political life in Centre county. His word is as good as his bond. Upon the writer's visit to the old hunter's commodious home the report of his having killed the last native elk in Pennsylvania was confirmed. The horns were shown to the writer and the old gentleman consented to write an article describing the slaying of the last elk. The animal was supposed to have been driven into the Seven Mountains by forest fires in Clearfield and other northern counties as previous to its having been killed no native elks had been killed in the region since the one brought to dust in 1857 by Caleb Mitchell, a famous hunter residing at the head of Treaster Valley.

Captain Decker as slayer of Pennsylvania's last native elk, joins an immortal coterie of hunters. Among them are Colonel John Kelly, who killed the last Pennsylvania buffalo in 1801; John Casher, who killed the last panther in 1886; Seth I. Nelson, who killed the last wolverine in 1863; John Razey, who killed the last grey wolf in 1890, and Edgar Austin Schwench, who slew the last brown bear in 1911. In connection with the last named gentleman, it is said that he will have to look to his laurels, as another brown bear is now prowling about on the Slate Ridge, near Milroy.

Captain Decker, who must be close to seventy years of age, enjoys excellent health. It is interesting to add that his good wife was present when he killed the last elk. Few women have enjoyed a greater privilege than this. Mrs. Decker admires her talented husband and acclaims him as the greatest of Pennsylvania hunters. In this she is not far wrong, as few men living have brought down more big game in their day. Pennsylvania hunting history will have to be re-written and the name of Decker substituted for that of Jacobson, as slayer of the last native elk.

A western elk was killed at the mouth of Treaster Valley last November by Dayton Aikens, who mistook it for a big deer. In future Dr. Kalbfus' elk should wear bells, as several of them have already fallen victims to the rifles of mistaken or careless hunters.

BUY AT HOME.

The Reason Local Money Finds its Way into the Coffers of Mail Order Advertisers.

If local merchants would make but half the effort to inform the public of their wares that is done by large mail order houses, much money which rightfully belongs in a community would remain here to do public good.

It is not because the mail order houses have any better goods than those handled by home merchants that they reap such a harvest from the rural sections, but only because they spare no pains in bringing before the people their merchandise in a clear convincing way, by test and illustration. The merits of the goods are gone into detail, their fine points emphasized and nearly always accompanied by a picture. The readers attention is attracted; he is interested by the typographical effect and wording of the advertisement. He is convinced that it is just the thing he has been looking for, and because the mail order house has made every thing so easy for him to order, the local merchant loses a sale and good money has gone from the community, never to return.

Believing in home patronage the Reporter has kept from its columns much mail order advertising which would have proven detrimental to home merchants. In every instance the offer has been good, cash usually accompanying the order, the advertising in plate form, requiring practically no composition; nothing to do but give the space and pocket the money. But the offer has always been spurned and the cash returned.

Mr. Merchant, is not a paper which has your interests at heart worthy of your announcement in its columns? A medium which proves profitable for a foreign advertiser should surely prove the same for a home advertiser. Think it over, then act.

DIXON'S TALKS ON HEALTH.

"Temper and Children" is Commissioner's Topic For This Week.

"Our bodies are our gardens, to which our wills are gardeners."

Physical, mental and moral health depend upon self control and the cultivation of this in children is of greater importance than any other single virtue.

Who has not observed the disciplinary efforts of parents with a feeling that they could improve upon the methods employed and the results obtained. The casual observer usually decides that parents are more often to blame for the faults of their offspring than the children themselves. Like begets like and the loss of self control by the father and mother is almost certain to be reflected in the child.

With children of a high strung and nervous temperament the display of passion and the loss of self control is to be expected. To teach a child to govern itself and to control these gusts of temper is worthy of the most careful study, persistent and kindly effort.

To permit a child to give way to passion during the early years of its life is apt, when the strain of the real burdens of life are added in later years, to end in a nervous or mental breakdown.

All students of nervous diseases are aware of the possibility of the inheritance of mental defects present in the parents. No one factor is of greater aid in equipping a child to battle with hereditary tendencies of this character than its education in self control. It is of the greatest aid in the establishment of mental equilibrium and the maintenance of a sane poise. Knowledge, morality and a healthy, temperate physical existence are the fruits derived from the cultivation of this virtue.

May Pole Exercises.

The May Day exercise in Grange Arcadia, on Saturday evening, by the junior members of Progress Grange was a delightful affair, and one that ought to be repeated every succeeding May. The program was simple, yet altogether appropriate, and consisted of twining the May pole, music and drill. Miss Helen Bartholomew had the young people in charge.

A decision rendered in the county court by Judge Orvis makes the State Highway Department responsible for the building and repairing of all roads formally taken over by the state. The Blair and Chester county courts passed on the same question, but came to the opposite conclusion. Judge Orvis' decree, at all events, will make the State Department responsible in Centre county. The question was raised by the College township supervisors, who first made a move to force the county commissioners to build a new bridge just above Lemont. Later a case was made out in which the county commissioners demanded that the State Highway Department be compelled to build this particular bridge, which, by the way, is a menace to the traveling public. The case will likely be appealed to the higher courts.
